EIGHTIETH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

The companies composing the Eightieth Regiment were recruited in the First Congressional District, under the call of July, 1862. They were rendezvoused at Princeton in the months of August and September, at which place the regiment was organized. On the 8th of September it moved to Indianapolis, where it was armed, and at once proceeded to Covington, Kentucky, then threatened by the invading forces of the rebel General, Kirby Smith. After remaining there a few days, the regiment was transported to Louisville, where it joined the army of Gen. Buell, then being reorganized to march against Bragg. On the 1st of October it moved from Louisville on this campaign, and on the 8th participated in the battle of Chaplin Hill, of Perryville. In this engagement, fought just one month after the Eightieth left its camp of rendezvous, the regiment bore a conspicuous part, losing, in killed and wounded, one hundred and fifty men and officers; of the officers two were killed, three wounded and two captured. After Bragg had been driven out of Kentucky, the regiment remained in that State doing guard duty, and engaging in two expeditions against John Morgan's raiding cavalry. The first of these expeditions started on the 29th of December, 1862, and ended on the 9th of January, 1863. The other campaign was commenced on the 20th of June and closed on the 5th of July, 1863.

On the 18th of August, the Eightieth left Kentucky with Gen. Burnside's army, and marched across the Cumberland Mountains into East Tennessee, occupying Kingston and Knoxville during the first week of September, and participating in the active campaigns that followed. On the 7th of November it was engaged in the battle at Kingston, and in January, 1864, took part in the engagement at Mossy Creek. In the spring of 1864, the regiment left East Tennessee, with the Twenty-Third Corps, commanded by Gen. Schofield, and joined Gen. Sherman's army. Reaching the vicinity of Red Clay, Georgia, it went into camp there, and on the 9th of May, moved with the Twenty-Third Corps in the direction of Dalton.

In the memorable Atlanta campaign, the Eightieth participated in all the important engagements from Dalton to Atlanta, including the battles of Resacca, Kenesaw, Peach Tree Creek, and the fights before Atlanta. During this campaign the regiment sustained a total loss, in killed and wounded, of one hundred and seventy-five.

After the fall of Atlanta, the regiment moved northward with the Twenty-Third Corps, in pursuit of Hood's army, then making a raid in the rear of General Sherman's army. Upon reaching Gaylesville, Alabama, further pursuit was abandoned, and the Twenty-Third Corps was detached from Sherman's army and sent into Tennessee, becoming a part of Gen. Thomas' command. In the campaign that followed this transfer, commencing on the 25th of November, and ending on the 30th of December, 1864, the Eightieth was almost constantly kept on active duty. On the 30th of November it participated in the desperately fought battle at Franklin, and then fell back to Nashville, near which place, on the 15th and 16th of December, it took part in the engagement that proved so victorious to the Union arms, under General

EIGHTIETH REGIMENT INDIANA VOLUNTEERS.

Thomas. After the retreat of the defeated army of the rebel General Hood, the regiment moved with its corps in pursuit, following the enemy to the Tennessee river.

In January, 1865, Schofield's Corps was transferred to Alexandria, Virginia, where it embarked on steamers for North Carolina. Accompanying it on this expedition, the Eightieth participated in the campaign against Wilmington, Kingston, Goldsboro and Raleigh. It was conspicuously engaged in the successful attack upon Fort Anderson, near Wilmington, on the 19th of February. Upon the arrival of Sherman's army in North Carolina, the Twenty-Third Corps took part in the movements of the united armies against Johnson's rebel forces, and after the surrender of the latter the Corps remained on duty in that State, the Eightieth proceeding to Saulsbury with the First Division of the Corps. Here it remained until the 22d of June, 1865, when the organization proper was mustered out of service.

Returning to Indianapolis with about three hundred and twenty men and officers for discharge, the regiment was present at a reception given to returned regiments in the State House grove, on which occasion addresses of welcome were delivered by Governor Morton, General Hovey, and others. During its term of service the regiment has had three hundred and twenty-five men and officers killed and wounded, and two taken prisoners, and has traveled seven thousand two hundred and forty-five miles; of which one thousand and fifty was by water, two thousand four hundred and forty-five by railroad, and three thousand seven hundred and fifty on foot.

At the muster-out of the organization only such of the men as had entered service prior to the first of October, 1862, were discharged, all other recruits being held to service. These were transferred to the One Hundred and Twenty-Ninth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, which regiment was retained in service until the 29th of August, 1865, when it was mustered out of service.
