

TWO HUNDRED AND SECOND REGIMENT.

COMPANY A, of this regiment, was recruited in Carbon county, B in Juniata, C in Adams, D in Northumberland and Cumberland, E in Lehigh, F in Northampton, G and H in Cumberland, I in Union, and K in Huntingdon. Recruiting commenced early in August, the troops rendezvousing at Camp Curtin, where, on the 3d of September, the regiment was organized, by the choice of the following field officers: Charles Albright, of Carbon county, Colonel; John A. Maus, of Union county, Lieutenant Colonel; Walter H. Seip, of Lehigh county, Major. Colonel Albright had served as Colonel of the One Hundred and Thirty-second Regiment, and a number of other officers and a portion of the men had been in the service; but the majority of the command knew little of military duty. On the 10th, the regiment proceeded to Camp Couch, near the town of Chambersburg, where it was subjected to thorough drill, and on the 23d was led out on a three days' march for exercise. General Couch, who was in command of the Department of the Susquehanna, having encountered some opposition in the execution of his orders in Columbia county, sent Colonel Albright to the scene of the disturbance, who was, consequently, for some time, absent from his regiment, but in the meantime performed the duties of his difficult mission to the entire satisfaction of the Commanding General.

On the 29th, the regiment proceeded via Washington, to Alexandria, and upon its arrival, was sent by General Slough, in command of the post, to duty on the Manassas Gap Railroad, taking position along the road from Thoroughfare Gap to Rectorstown. General Sheridan had just previous opened his brilliant campaign in the Shenandoah Valley, and over this road the supplies for his army were transported. To keep it open, was consequently of vital importance, and to break it up and hinder and destroy trains, was a cherished purpose of the disloyal inhabitants dwelling along the line, and of Moseby and his guerrillas, who claimed this as their favorite stamping ground. This duty was exceedingly arduous and harassing. If a soldier went outside the lines, he was immediately set upon, and either murdered or sent away into captivity. Frequent collisions occurred, in some of which the skirmishing was brisk; those at Salem on the 8th and 16th, resulting in some loss. In both of these the enemy was driven, a number of his men being killed and wounded. On the 10th, a party of the enemy succeeded in throwing a train of cars from the track while running at full speed, killing four or five, and severely wounding about twenty. Not content with this, they poured repeated volleys upon the poor sufferers in the wreck. Upon hearing of this outrage, Colonel Albright hastened to the scene of the disaster, and immediately ordered that every building, within the radius of one mile of the wreck, should be burned. To secure trains against similar disasters in the future, all the prominent rebels along the line were apprehended, and a portion of them made to accompany each train. This had the desired effect, and the trains were no more disturbed. In speaking of this part of its service, Colonel Albright says: "The soldiers would have preferred being with the army at the front to doing this duty. Guarding railroads is always distasteful to soldiers, they being in constant danger, and without any opportunity, scarcely, of winning honorable distinction. But they appreciated the necessity of the work and cheerfully performed it." "Constant activity and vigilance," says another officer, "were required; for guerrilla bands, frequently disguised in our uniforms, constantly prowled about the country, attacking detachments inferior to them in numbers, and, like the stealthy Indian of the western frontier, creeping upon our sentries and assassinating them."

When the triumphs of Sheridan in the valley were assured, and the enemy effectually routed, this railroad was abandoned, and the ties and rails were removed to Alexandria. In this laborious duty the regiment was engaged, and when completed, it retired to Alexandria, where it was assigned to the duty of guarding a portion of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, extending from Bull Run to Alexandria, with headquarters at Fairfax Station. In the vicinity of the Station, four large works were built, and the troops were kept busy in protecting the woodmen engaged in chopping, and the teams in moving wood to the Station for the use of the army. In a communication sent on the 1st of January, 1865, as a New Year's greeting to the regiment by General Gamble, in command of the brigade, occurs the following acknowledgment of its good conduct and the soldierly qualities of its commander: "From my personal knowledge, and the report of the inspecting officer, I consider it my duty to return you my thanks for your energy and personal attention to the duties and interests of your command. You have a good regiment, and I am glad to know the right kind of a Colonel is at the head of it."

Towards the close of May, 1865, the regiment was ordered to Philadelphia, where it reported upon its arrival to General Cadwalader, and was sent by him to the anthracite coal regions of the State. Headquarters of the regiment were established at Tamaqua, and the command was distributed in detachments to various points in that region. Colonel Albright, who had been previously brevetted Brigadier General, was placed in command of the district. Early in July, company A was sent to Pittsburg. Towards the close of July, the detachments assembled in Harrisburg, and on the 3d of August, the regiment was mustered out of service.
